

The Salt Lake Herald.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY BY THE HERALD COMPANY.

SNUBBING THE VETERANS.

THE VETERAN, once such a powerful factor in national politics, is rapidly being relegated to the background. A new era has dawned and the great captains of industry and conquerors on the field of commerce monopolize all the homage. Henceforth the veterans must be content to subsist on such crumbs of honor as are brushed from these great men's table.

Emphasis has been placed on this situation by the incident that led to the refusal of the veterans to march in the inaugural parade. The men who served their country in the civil and the Spanish wars expected to be the guard of honor of the president. There was good reason for such an expectation, for the Spanish war veterans had served under President McKinley and the survivors of the civil war claimed him as a comrade in arms. But when the matter came to the attention of General Green, grand marshal of the parade and head of the asphalt combine, he promptly vetoed it, informed the veterans that an Ohio militia outfit would be the guard of honor and that they might consider themselves lucky to get as good a position as he had assigned them. The veterans felt that they had been slighted and refused to participate in any way.

It is probable that there was no slight intended. The incident is but the natural result of the changes that have been going on for several years. Anything that has a touch of the sentimental in it has long been going out of style. The powers in Washington are too busy settling up with the captains of industry who paid campaign subscriptions to pay any attention to the men who fought for the country forty years ago.

REFORM IN MINOR COURTS.

BENNER X. SMITH'S BILL to consolidate city courts and abolish the fee system is in line with the best municipal practice all over the country. The fee method in small courts invariably leads to abuses and Salt Lake has had its full share of them in days gone by.

One central court, properly officered, will avoid the abuses of the old plan of smaller courts and not the least of its advantages will be the greater publicity attending its proceedings. The ability to command high-class legal talent in such a court is its great recommendation, carrying with it the certainty that the court record will be more satisfactory in every way than where the responsibility and legal business are divided among a number of minor courts.

The picture given the house of the abuses of justice courts run in the interest of collection agencies was not overdrawn in the least. One collection concern—happily there is only one such here—carried its lawless use of justice court privileges to the criminal stage and the exemption law of the past two years was one result.

What is needed is a fair exemption law and an administration of justice that shall be equitable for both creditor and debtor. Mr. Smith's plan promises to furnish such a reform.

WHERE ECONOMY BEGINS.

AFTER PILING UP APPROPRIATIONS to the tune of more than a billion dollars the Republican leaders in congress are beginning to show symptoms of becoming more rigidly economical. This is not likely to be carried to the extent of cutting in on any of the two hundred and fifty millions for military and naval expenses or in any of the appropriations which the good trusts are interested in. The economy which has come into vogue relates solely to appropriations that are calculated to be beneficial to the general public.

The streak of prudence which has been found to underlie the unprecedented extravagance of the present congress was brought to light when an amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill was presented to the house on Thursday. This amendment provided for an appropriation for experiments in free mail delivery in the smaller towns and cities and in the rural districts. There have already been a few trials along this line and the last report of the postmaster general shows that they have developed important results. In addition to the great convenience of such a system to the farmer and the business man in small communities, the system has increased land values in the districts where it has been put in operation, as well as tending to bring in settlers. Further than this, it has been demonstrated that the extra expense of such a system is in a great measure made up in a few years by the increase in the revenues. The postmaster general's report shows very clearly that the benefits accruing to the public from the extension of the free delivery system far outweigh the additional expense of the system.

Unfortunately, however, those who are benefited are only individuals composing the great mass of the public and smaller business houses. Consequently the watchdogs of the treasury arose from their long slumber and set up a fierce howl. Uncle Joe Cannon from Illinois was on his feet in an instant, protesting that if this entering wedge of free delivery were sanctioned it would not be long before every city and town would be enjoying this infamous privilege, until the government would be reduced to the awful extremity of paying out $50,000,000 annually purely for the benefit of the people. A halt ought to be called at once. Once started, nothing could stop this terrible outrage. The majority agreed and the inquiry was squelched by a united majority. The $50,000,000 river and harbor bill went through without a murmur.

The rural districts and small cities may feel a trifle hard toward the government on this score, but they should remember that while we indulge in the luxury of good trusts and a more costly armament than is afforded by any European nation there must be economy somewhere.

FIRE DRILL FOR MINERS.

THE DIAMONDVILLE MINE TRAGEDY calls attention to the need of the establishment of a suitable fire drill for workers in mines. In the present instance, had such a precaution been taken there is good reason to believe that all of the score or more of miners who were caught in the death trap would have escaped. There was an exit by which one man escaped, but unfortunately it was unknown to the majority of the men. Had every man been informed of this means of escape in case of fire, and had they been properly drilled, so as to have made for the exit in an orderly manner as soon as the alarm was given, there is little question but the majority, if not all, of the men would have escaped.

The value of careful fire drill was exemplified yesterday in the fire that destroyed the Nebraska restaurant, where every prisoner was marched in safety from the burning building without one of them escaping from the guards. Such results can be attributed to the training that the inmates are given every day. Had it not been for this or some such preparation the fire would undoubtedly have resulted in the loss of dozens of lives and in terrible disorder. Time and again, in schools and other public institutions where the fire drill has been introduced, its efficacy has been demonstrated. The liability of mines to fire and confusion is so certain to result in tragedy that it would seem advisable to make it compulsory for mine owners not only to provide suitable escapes, but to maintain a system of fire drill that will enable the men to make use of them when emergency arises, without hesitation or confusion.

To whom it May Concern: My education has all run down and I was wholly unutilized and incapable of governing myself. On the advice of a friend I took home a bottle of Dr. Mark's Benevolent Assimilator and am now capable of governing a province.

JOSE SERAPO.

Deduct from the 8 1/2 cents a second that the legislature costs what Mr. Gasmann considers he is worth and there will not be a great deal left to divide among the rest of the law makers.

General Gomez thinks the Cubans cannot yet be left to govern themselves. All of which indicates very strongly that General Gomez's political ambitions have encountered a frost.

It begins to look as though the flag had got so far away from the constitution that there is little likelihood of their ever again getting within speaking distance of one another.

An English nobleman has married a chorus girl. Here is such an instance of getting a title for a mere song as will arouse the envy of every female bargain-hunter in America.

During the war Spanish cartoonists were wont to portray America as a hog. The administration's Cuban policy looks like a very earnest endeavor to live up to the cartoons.

Again the superstition of the past has encountered the onward march of civilization and got the worst of it; the emperor of Germany has been jolted by a trolley car.

The McKinley policy of protection, it is announced, has been expanded so as to embrace Cuba, but the gem of the Antilles is coy and doesn't want to be embraced.

"Ships that pass in the night and speak each other in passing" are nothing to the judges that are passed in these days when nobody passes the judges.

The powers have decided to begin leaving China in March, but at the rate looting has been going on, they probably won't leave it much.

It is now in order for the senate to have the constitution embroidered on a door mat and present it to the president.

Tom Reed may well begin to think that he was a czar in name only.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Mrs. Charles E. McCullough will entertain at luncheon next Thursday.

The students of the Salt Lake business college gave a successful dance last evening at Christensen's.

The Ladies' auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. will meet at the association rooms at 2:30 this afternoon. Committees will be appointed to arrange for the Patrick's day entertainment, and all members are urged to be present.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Doing business at the same old stand," was Manager Hale's salutation at the Theatre last evening. The remark was justified, for the Theatre was packed. If the attendance keeps up through today, for matinee and evening, "Way Down East" will surely have broken the record Mr. Brady went out for.

"The Telephone Girl," went before a fair sized audience at the Grand last night. The piece will be done in matinee today. Tonight is its finish.

The sale for the Grau Opera company's engagement opened at the Grand yesterday and was entirely satisfactory to the management.

Director Stephens has called a special rehearsal of the choir for "Faust" music Sunday at the tabernacle.

The box sale for Eugene Blair's engagement begins at the Theatre this morning. In addition to "A Low Price Quality," Miss Eugene Blair is presenting "Carmen" during her tour this season.

NEW BOOKS.

"Gwyneth of Thorough," by Frederick W. Hayes. Published by the F. M. Lupton Publishing company.

A Pink romance, the continuation of the adventures of Mr. Ambrose Gwyneth, a young Jacobite gentleman of Kent, who served with the Duke of Monmouth in the defense of Philippe V (grandson of Louis XIV.) against the emperor of Germany. "A Kent Squire" is the title of Mr. Hayes' first story, and this sequel is not less interesting. It is a series of exciting episodes. The opening chapters present a graphic picture of the English court of Charles II. and Louis XIV. and the events connected with the succession to the crown. The brilliant coup d'etat by which the Duc d'Orleans secured the regency is made the subject of another chapter. The hero, Mr. Gwyneth, the hero of Mr. Hayes' novel, had several years before had the good fortune to have the Duke of Orleans put in charge of the laboratory, where he is pleased to dabble in chemistry, as well as in the fashion of the day. He finds out here, however, of very great value in many ways. While the historic interest is paramount, the personal life of Ambrose continues with the keen, a mass of language, and a vindictive rival, and adventure succeeds adventure in the pursuit of the Duke of Orleans. The hero's father is restored to his own, and a new era of a new and more peaceful era is begun.

"Ad Astra," by Charles Whitworth Wynne. Published by John Lane, New York.

A long poem upon an abstract subject in this day and generation must have a very considerable merit to call for more than one edition. "Ad Astra" was first published in April, 1900, and has since been published in several editions. It was printed in October, 1900. Mr. Wynne's "Ad Astra" must have considerable merit. The poem is a study of little due to the subject matter, and yet covers very well the series of reflections upon nature, love, philosophy, faith and religion. The keynote is love, love to God, love to man, love to the world, love to the universe. The poem is a study of the human mind, of the human soul, of the human heart, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of the human happiness, of the human misery, of the human life, of the human death, of the human resurrection, of the human glory, of the human triumph, of the human victory, of the human defeat, of the human failure, of the human success, of the human loss, of the human gain, of the human hope, of the human despair, of the human faith, of the human doubt, of the human belief, of the human disbelief, of the human knowledge, of the human ignorance, of the human wisdom, of the human folly, of the human virtue, of the human vice, of the human goodness, of the human evil, of the human beauty, of the human ugliness, of the human strength, of the human weakness, of the human power, of the human impotence, of the human glory, of the human shame, of the human honor, of the human dishonor, of the human praise, of the human blame, of the human love, of the human hate, of the human friendship, of the human enmity, of the human peace, of the human war, of the human joy, of the human sorrow, of